Chip, the Puppy with Two Homes Jodi Hassler

For children, divorce lawyers, and therapists, Chip, the Puppy with Two Homes by noted child advocate and psychotherapist Jodi Hassler, is a useful tool to gauge and direct a child's thinking about shared custody. With vibrant illustrations by Josh Wright, Hassler creates a place where children of all ages are able to relate, empathize, and discover what it will be like to split their time between two homes, one of the most difficult adjustments that kids are asked to make. This engaging story about how a playful puppy adored by two families finds his way into two homes is a dynamic approach for helping a child cope with his or her natural fears and frustrations. Following the advice of a very wise owl, the puppy discovers how to adjust to a new sort of family life, one in which there are two sets of rules, habits, and expectations. While the love Chip receives is unconditional, it is his own self-awareness and his new perspective that makes all the difference.
