Teenager Chloé Templeton and Jasper, a Labrador, have one thing in common. They are both wearing TransFixa devices which allow them to travel in space and time. But why are they wearing them? When Chloé is kidnapped by scientist Theo Rattle, and taken to the new planet Dorian, she tries everything to escape from his clutches and soon befriends Jasper, a three year old retired "sniffer" dog from Heathrow Airport, who has suffered a similar fate. When you're a highly gifted sixteen year old teenager, and already in the third year at university studying astrophysics, it soon becomes evident why Theo needs her help. Theo's assistant, Grutz, is a small monk who does magical things and he's the one to watch. Mistral, a space Fallon, in fact a modern day Pegasus, soon realizes Jasper can help him find the magical ore, Aurel, that is essential to protect his planet, Fallonova. This can only be found on a very dangerous planet in a parallel universe known as Bewaxa, where people have gone but no-one has yet been known to return. Reluctant time traveller Jasper is taken there by Widder and Rani, members of Mistral's family. Will they overcome the first test, on how to escape from the shrinking room, and then the final test with the evil Taupe before they can obtain the Aurel? And, in addition, we have teenagers Mark and Danny, who have lived since the "Big Bang" if not before, and they think that they govern the universe. But do they or is the computer Gulliver really in charge? The boys need the Aurel as Gulliver is made from this and is currently in backup mode as he needs a spare part.
