Unknown Down: A Cold War Incident Involving UFOs over South Florida and the Subsequent Cover-Up by the U.S. Military Jack Roth

On the night of March 31, 1967, a series of strange events occurred in South Florida involving several unidentified flying objects, U.S. and Cuban military personnel, and hundreds of civilian witnesses. Bill Schroeder, a young Army fire control operator at B Battery HAWK missile site in Key West, tracked several objects on radar traveling at impossible speeds. These “bogeys” evaded both U.S. and Cuban fighter jets scrambled to intercept them. Even more disturbing, the UFOs emitted an electromagnetic countermeasure that disabled B Battery’s electronic surveillance and caused the destruction of one of the Cuban MiG-21s. Told by his superiors the incident was part of a NORAD drill and not to discuss it with anyone, Bill Schroeder lived with this secret for years before finally coming forward with his story. Author Jack Roth shares Schroeder’s incredible account, along with other witness testimony and details that have been brought to light over the years as a result of Schroeder’s persistent research. Unknown Down also includes interviews with former military personnel who experienced similar encounters and UFO researchers who point to the significance of cases involving military/missile bases, military witnesses, confirmed radar acquisition, and other tangible evidence supporting the existence of UFOs.
